

THE REPUBLIC WILL ENTERTAIN.

Distinguished People Who Will Be the Boys' Guests on the Glorious Fifth.

They Have Arranged a Programme Which for Uniqueness and Originality Is Without Rival.

The Limit of Dress.

gazing at them on the Fourth. They have issued some invitations to friends and sympathizers in the city, to a few local people in the vicinity of the farm, and to a few neighbor boys to whom they wish to give a good time.

One to Col. Grant.

The invitations extended in the city went to some fine people, and they are to be made the guests of the Journal for the big day. One of them is Colonel Fred Grant, of the Police Board. He is wanted up there so that he may see just how well a lot of East Siders can conduct themselves when they have half a chance.

Colonel Grant sees and hears of much crime and poverty. At the Republic the boys will show him that when they are permitted to govern themselves there is very little of either among them, and they will show this gentleman of the New York police how well their own department is conducted without a police board.

Incidentally, Colonel Grant, who is interested in this sort of work, will make an address to the entire Republic and tell them what he thinks about them after they have been on parade. They will be glad to see him, because they know what kind of an impression they will make.

Another member of the city government will be with Colonel Grant in the person of President Jerolman, of the Board of Aldermen. In his position he is a powerful man in the guidance of the destinies of the greatest city in the big Union. President Miller, of the Republic, and his various official associates will try to give to President Jerolman a demonstration of what good government is by the manner in which they will handle their one hundred and fifty citizens on the big day.

Justice There, Too.

The Supreme Court of the State will be represented among the guests by Judge Mead and Judge Gierach. These gentlemen of the legal world will see justice administered by the Republic just in quite as dignified and able a manner as they themselves mete it out in their ponderous decisions. It is particularly pleasing to the Republic that they are going to be one of the crowd. When they have seen the boys they will have learned a good deal more of the capacities of the boy character for self-government than they ever dreamed existed.

One of the noted criminal lawyers of New York is Emanuel Friend. He is going along with the Republic's guests to watch the proceedings of the day. He has had much to do with criminals of all classes and knows the causes of nine-tenths of the crime of this big town. He will see nine-tenths of those familiar causes removed by the system of things at the Republic.

Mrs. James H. Scrymgeour, the president of the Woman's Protective Association and a profound student of sociological problems, will be one of the ladies present. She goes to the Republic to make a study of its plans and progress and of individual members of the Republic as well. She expects to find in this self-supporting colony a solution of some of the problems of the poor which have presented themselves to her in the course of her life study.

Some Other Guests.
Other guests in this particular party will be Dr. Albert Shaw, of the Review of Reviews; Mr. James Bruce, of the Children's Aid Society; General James McLeer, ex-postmaster of Brooklyn; and Dr. M. Eleazar, physician, specialist in children's diseases, and philanthropist. Each one of these gentlemen is invited for a particular purpose, and goes to study some particular phase of human life in which he is interested.

When it was proposed to have all these distinguished people with them on the Fourth, or rather, Fifth, the Republic made an appeal to its foster parent, the Journal. They wanted to have their guests entertained in a manner which was entirely beyond them, and the Journal gladly accepted the task. During the journey to and from the Republic, the party will be the guests and care of the Journal.

The steam yacht Cheramita has been provided for them and anchored at the New York Yacht Club landing at the foot of East Twenty-sixth street. That will be the starting point. The yacht is a roomy vessel, capable of carrying more than a hundred people, with every appointment necessary to comfort and pleasure.

The party will sail Monday at 10 o'clock. At that hour the Hudson should be particularly beautiful, and the weather pleasant. The landing will be at Haverstraw. Arriving there, the party will be met by carriages and given the picturesque two-mile drive over the river hills to the bowl-shaped valley in which the Republic is situated. Once on the farm the Journal's entertainment ceases and the guests are the property of the Republic. The entertainment offered by them is unique.

In the Big Tent.
In the big assembly tent, where there is a stage and seats, the guests will be received by President Miller, who will make them a short address. It is his initial effort on the stump, and he has spent a week of afternoons in the orchard practicing. That those public gentlemen will hear something entirely new in the annals of public speaking the president is assured.

You know the street boys can sing. Music is just as natural to them as living. They know all the airs the hand organs play, and, strangely so, they know the words which accompany the melodies. So, when it said that the next number of the programme is a duet by Joelson and Whitney, don't think it will be a farce. Whitney is a bit of a lad with a child soprano which touches, and Joelson, for a lad of his years, knows something about harmony and sings a good, strong alto. The duet is good.

Veneno Ruggero, who speaks English better than he sounds, follows the music with a recitation, entirely new in phrasing and gesture, the sort of recitation you don't hear every day. Thomas Murphy, a piece of the old and in voice and mannerism, will render one of his Irish ditties, a thing among the troubles of a green street car driver. If you've ever been in one of the old Broadway varieties, you will recognize Murphy. Not that he ever did a turn there, but he looks the part.

Berens are never particularly pleasing, but those which follow, by Judge Woods will be worth listening to for its very self. He will tell you what he thinks a citizen should be. Woods has been enough different kinds of citizens to know what he is talking about.

Have you ever heard "All Coons Look Alike to Me?" It is unique in the original version, with a coon dialect. Vallance, who is called "Dutch," for short, has a new arrangement of the popular melody. He does it in German, and whether you know the tongue or not, it is irresistibly funny. Whitney is too good for a single edition, and he follows "Dutch" in a couple of selections, those pathetic musical stories of broken homes and hard lives which are so popular on the streets. He renders them with true street pathos.

A Star Number.
And then comes the star musical number of the programme, in a sextet led by Kelly. He does the solo, and Schreiber, Whitney, Murphy, Butler and Joelson do the harmony in the chorus. The song is that old favorite, "Kathleen." In their rehearsals it has been the hit of the show.

When little Henry Heckman tells the tale of his ambition to be a Senator, the audience will get the second big laugh of the day. He is a very little fellow, a character actor work, and he has a bit of verse which gives him a good opportunity for his peculiar talents. Actors say that character work is the hardest of all things to do on the stage. Heckman would make a good actor as he is a citizen.

No Fourth of July would be complete without a "Marco Rezarik." The warlike gentleman is represented in this particular fun-making by John Herbert, who is scarcely big enough to have lifted the sword of the original Marco. But he has a good deal of voice and a lot of perseverance, and does all that can be expected of him for the good of Marco.

George McCune does some character work in a song, Kouth Von Jastral, sur-named the "Count," does a monologue of his own. Joelson has a solo, and Augustus Conklin, prolific of gesture and willing as to voice, recites an original poem that is funnier than some things you see in the comic papers. "The whole to conclude," as the circus says, with a monster musical effect led by Murphy and Kelly. They will recite the charms of "Sweet Roale O'Grady" and the entire Republic will make good their statements in a combined chorus.

Colonel Grant Will Talk.
Colonel Grant will listen to all that, and then he will make a talk to the boys. It will not be an oration, not the kind of thing you would hear in town, but a quiet little talk to the boys, of a kind which they can understand and appreciate. After the fun the visitors will be shown the grounds and be driven back to Haverstraw, where the yacht will await them. A luncheon will be served for them about both going and coming.

But the boys will not be done. When the good shadows of night come down the fireworks will be turned loose. The supply is really heavier than is needed for the occasion, but the firms have been generous in their donations, and there will literally be fireworks to burn and they will be burned far into the night. The neighbors will see the best display of their lives. A contingent of Haverstraw boys will be the guests of the evening. There will be games in the forenoon, before the arrival of the city guests. The details for those will be told to-morrow.

BIG STORE AND FRESH AIR. OPENING AT BAR HARBOR.

A Happy Combination of Business Enterprise and Charitable Purpose.

Selfish greed has evolved the maxim: "Heaven helps those who help themselves." Philanthropy has improved it to the higher wisdom: "They best help themselves who help others." In the light of this nobler inspiration, the Siegel-Cooper Company have given to the poor of New York a direct interest and to all humane persons a sympathetic concern in the business of "The Big Store" during Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. On each of those days 1 per cent of the entire sales will be given to the fresh air and ice funds, contributions to which are being collected by New York newspapers. The percentage on Thursday will be donated to the Journal's fresh air fund.

Under ordinary circumstances, the sums accruing from such a participation in the enormous business of "The Big Store" would be very well worthy of consideration, but under the present conditions might be deferred, or even neglected, but extraordinary attentions are offered in the way of low prices, to stimulate trade to an unusual degree.

The prices announced in many special lines of goods are indeed such as to compel the belief that they are actually offered at cost. And these reductions are not merely in such things as are ordinarily regarded to be large quantities, or upon occasion employed as "leaders" or offered cheap because they are the residue and non-sellers of stock, but in the best quality, in material, style and workmanship. And they generally are such things as are wanted constantly in all households and that one must buy and buy often, here or elsewhere. Shoes, for instance: Ladies must wear shoes abroad as they may go to Kimping—and in this hot weather, if they consult their comfort, their wear will be russets, tans and chamois, light, trim and stylish. Ordinarily they must pay for such shoes from two to three dollars, at least, but this week can buy them at "The Big Store" for $2.00.

In dress goods the reductions are equally noteworthy: brilliant mohair for 25 cents per yard, covert suitings for 30 cents, black broadened India silks of fine quality for 40 cents, fine tulle for 50 cents, new design Foulard silks for 25 cents, and so on. In wash goods the cuts in price are from 40 to 50 per cent below actual. At housekeepers will take a lively interest in such an opportunity to get fine groceries cheaply as advertised on this occasion. The reductions are as extensive as the jobbers demand at wholesale and rule at canneries and dairies where purchases are made under contract by the cashed. And for nice table furniture, kitchen appliances and utensils, bedroom furnishings, and even parlor furniture, there never were such chances offered as are here presented. A rich and varied assortment of red and rattan furniture, just the thing for summer comfort, is put on sale at just one-half of its legitimate price.

In gloves, ladies' neckwear, faces and parasols extraordinary inducements are offered in the way of low prices. In the superb goods, the full details of which may be learned from the advertisement in another column.

There doesn't seem to be any connection between lawn mowers and baby carriages, but it is worth mentioning that both are on the Big Store's list this week at figures that might tempt a flat dweller to invest in the former and a bachelor to buy one of the latter as a provision for the possible future.

MARRIED AND DIDN'T TELL

James C. Green, of Brooklyn, and Caroline S. Chichester, of Jersey City, Were Wedded in 1895.

Although James C. Green, of Brooklyn, and Miss Caroline S. John Chichester, of No. 647 Jersey avenue, Jersey City, were married over two years ago, the fact did not become known publicly until yesterday, when the following marriage notice appeared in a New York newspaper: GREEN-CHICHESTER.—At Newark, N. J., March 27, 1895, by Rev. Lewis Laupman, Caroline S. John Chichester, of Jersey City, N. J., to James C. Green, of Brooklyn.

Mrs. Green has taught in School No. 1 for several years, and has been popular with officials, teachers and pupils. The announcement of her marriage completely surprised them. Mrs. Green said that, for business reasons, the marriage was kept quiet, and her husband continued to live in Brooklyn and she to teach until he found employment in Jersey City. He has at length secured a position in a dry goods house, and it was decided to make the marriage public.

STILL "THE SUN DO MOVE."

It is not known whether the reverend gentleman will receive congratulatory dispatches from his fellow iconoclast, Professor Aarpatth, of Cordova, but his parishioners are determined to give the octogenarian a rousing good time.

"Ladies and Gentlemen."

THRASHED BY HIS LANDLADY.

Mrs. Hoffman Gave Actor Turner Three Punches in the Neck.

ATTACKED IN THE STREET.

He Was Airing His Good Clothes on Sixth Avenue When the Woman Approached.

A slim young man walked along Sixth avenue Friday afternoon in all the glory of a new, light-blue Spring suit. A large, fine-looking woman of thirty came upon the man unawares and gave him several hard punches in the neck. He fled up Twenty-eighth street, boarding an east-bound car.

The woman is Mrs. A. F. Hoffman, of No. 48 West Twenty-seventh street, who keeps a boarding house. The man is Frank Turner, an actor.

"What was it about?" repeated Mrs. Hoffman, yesterday. "Why, it was this: Turner has owed me $25 for board since last year. I kept asking for it till one morning he told me he was going to bring his father to dinner and he the father would settle the bill. His father is William Turner, a wholesale oyster dealer of Thirtieth street, N. W., Washington. Neither he nor the father came to dinner and Turner never showed himself again at my house."

"I heard young Turner had a place in 'The Man from Mexico,' at Hoyt's, and thought I could get the money from the manager. He never played with them, and I afterward found when he played at the Garden Theatre last season under the management of Joseph Carter when his salary was paid to him the manager held back money to pay his laundry bills and the property man for grease palms. I made up my mind if I ever laid eyes on Turner again I'd have my money, or know the reason why."

"I saw him on Sixth avenue, walking along as fine as you please in his good clothes, so I went up to him and asked for my money."

"I want give it to you at all," he said, "because you've been dunning me by postal card. Instead of paying you, I'll put the case in the hands of the District Attorney."

"I was mad and I gave him three good punches in the neck. I'd have whacked him in the face, but I was afraid to get too close to him. People standing about took up their hats to me, and told me to go for him, and even the policeman laughed."

"You weren't afraid of the police?" "I guess not. What right has a policeman to interfere when I'm trying to get the money that's honestly due me? Turner ran away as fast as he could, and I only wish I had another chance at him. I'll look him out for more punches if he comes my way."

"Did you dun him by postal card?" "My husband sent a postal card to Washington, care of his father, telling him he wanted the money. It's my opinion he can't get a place because he stutters."

London, July 3.—The Count and Countess Castellane (formerly Miss Anna Gould) have chartered the big ship-rigged steam yacht Valhalla, the property of Joseph Frederick Laycock, the well-known London banker.

She is of 1,400 tons displacement, is 239 feet long, has 57 feet beam, is fitted with triple expansion engines 145 horse power, is lighted by electricity and has two decks.

MILES CROWDED OUT MILLER.

The General Took the Room Reserved for the Admiral.

NO PLACE FOR NAVAL MAN.

British Officials Greatly Annoyed by the American Soldier's Act.

London, July 3.—General Nelson A. Miles, U. S. A., has been a rather embarrassing element in the United States Special Jubilee Mission and to the British Government officials, as he insisted upon taking more than they intended him to do. The Government had provided rooms, servants and a carriage at the Alexandria Hotel for Rear Admiral J. N. Miller, U. S. N., and General Miles, but the invitation was not extended to their wives. General Miles arrived first, with his wife, and occupied both rooms, leaving Admiral Miller the room the court officials had intended for the servants accompanying the two officers.

Admiral Miller thereupon declined to remain at the hotel and repaired to lodgings in Half Moon street, where his family was installed. The court officials were greatly distressed and wished to take a suite of rooms at the Victoria Hotel for Admiral Miller, but the latter declined.

Morton and Mrs. Morton; General Benjamin F. Tracy, Miss Tracy and Mrs. Wilmersley; General Nelson A. Miles and Mrs. Miles; Captain Maus, Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Henry White, Mrs. Bradley Martin, the Duchess of Marlborough, the Turkish Ambassador, the Belgian Minister, Mrs. Frank Leslie, Mrs. Ralph Vivian and Lady Cook.

AGAINST JOHNSON HEIRS.

London, July 3.—The arbitrator in the case known as the "Isle of Man Mystery," in which the heirs of Thomas Johnson sought to recover $70,000, of which sum $50,000 was insurance of the Mutual Life Company, of New York, has found that the alleged drowning of Johnson has not been proved, and costs are given against the plaintiffs.

Johnson and his brother left Port Erin in a rowboat, which was upset. The brother alleged that Thomas was drowned, but the evidence showed Thomas had been practicing with a swimming machine, and had purchased a false beard before going to the Isle of Man.

WOLCOTT GOES TO LONDON.

IMPALED ON A WAGON TONGUE.

Awful Fate of a Woman in a Double Runaway Accident.

HEROISM ALL IN VAIN.

In Trying to Save Her Young Tedman Was Killed by His Frightened Team.

North Tonawanda, N. Y., July 3.—As the result of a runaway on Oliver street, about 8 o'clock this afternoon, Steven Tedman, a young farmer from Shawnee, was instantly killed and the wife of his employer, who was riding with him, was thrown from the wagon and fatally injured.

Tedman stopped his team in front of a watering trough near the Erie depot, and as they stood there a train thundered by. The horses took fright and dashed down the street. Tedman, springing to the horses' heads and was dragged by almost a block, when he let go his hold and fell. The wagon passed over his body and left him dead.

The team continued down the street until they collided with a heavy wagon and the woman was thrown headlong out of the vehicle. She landed in front of the horses and the tongue of the wagon passed through her neck.
